

After dropping out of high school a day before graduation, Eva went to northern Europe to join a cult of professional alcoholics. After one weird moonshine trip, Eva started writing down her dreams in a journal. This journal became her book of story ideas, and now is a successful screenplay writer in Hollywood. In her spare time, she likes to hug people (especially her husband, Quentin Tarantino) and draw on her walls in crayon with her 9 month old daughter.

Chickadee

By Eva Figueroa-Piercy

Chickadee has spent a long 21 days inside his egg. When it finally come the time to come out of his shell, he discovers that the place he's in looks very different from what his mother described to him and his siblings. What more? No Momma! Luckily, another egg hatches next to him, and out comes his sister Mosie! She and him have no clue where they and are very confused, but one thing is certain: they need to get out!
