

Two fantasy characters a fighter and a healer are traveling through the woods looking for places to loot, they come upon a monster camp which they raid successfully. Child wakes up ready to go to school her father is in the kitchen eating cereal and drinking a bourbon. They argue over why she woke up so late and what they are going to do today. They leave each other both being worse off when they first talked and the child goes off to her room to get ready for school. Child goes to school and is sitting alone the whole time just eating alone. Father is at work eating alone, hating work, child hating school. Child comes home sad and jumps onto computer to start playing game.

Fantasy characters come back in and they greet each other and get ready to go questing, they traveling through desert area or some different place. They talk about their days and what happened, and how they both sucked, don't talk too much. As they are walking they come along things to fight and loot so they fight and loot super well together as a team. Doing bro stuff, when internet goes out forcing child off of the game in middle of raid. Upset for being interrupted after the child's day had finally gotten better because of the sweet loot and combat the child gets mad and starts causing a ruckus. Father comes in yelling at the child to stop and they just start yelling at each other even worse argument before child yells that they hate the father, and then just runs away. Both don't know how to face feelings so run away and they both feel like poop.

Open back up at school/work the two individuals are just throwing up in the bathroom super sad and depressed. Father comes home early and then you see him looking at picture of child, father, and mother(we assume). He starts to cry and then goes into his room. The child finally comes home already in tears from a terrible day, and they show up in the game ready to do final raid of the game. The fighter and the healer meet up and get ready to raid together. Both are off of their game however and end up making a huge mistake which gets them killed. Both characters disappear and we are back in the real world where the Father and Child are both pacing and muttering about how the other person screwed them over, and then they realize they fighting over the same thing, and they have the realization that all of their looting and fighting has been the two of them together. And you realize the girl is the fighter and the dad is the healer and they both go back into the raid to fight the beast finally defeating it.

They meet again in the real world giving each other a hug and they reconcile!

Fade to Black

FIN